

Who We Are

Established in 1924 and formed as a national body in 1933, the Australian Institute of International Affairs is an independent, non-partisan, non-profit organisation with more than 1300 members across seven state and territory branches.

The AIIA hosts various events, offers educational opportunities and produces publications to achieve its role and mission of:

- Providing a forum for debate
- Disseminating ideas
- Educating on international issues
- Collaborating with similar organisations

Her Excellency Ms Quentin Bryce AC, Governor-General of Australia, is the AIIA's National Honorary Visitor and Patron.

The AIIA hosted more than 200 events in 2010-2011 on current international issues of concern to Australia. It publishes the highly ranked Australian Journal of International Affairs and long-standing Australia in World Affairs series as well as policy commentaries and conference proceedings. The AIIA also maintains close contacts with more than 100 sister institutes and like-minded organisations throughout the world.

The AIIA offers a number of ways to get involved including membership, events, publishing, youth networks, education programs, donations and volunteering.

National President's Report

It was an honour to be elected last year as National President of the Australian Institute of International Affairs. I say this because the AIIA is the only organisation in Australia with a mandate to bring to the grassroots of our society ideas, information and discussion about Australia's role in the international environment. It is also the only community organisation dealing with external issues that has a branch in each Australian state.

The AIIA is a significant organisation which contributes effectively to thinking and debate in our country and abroad about international issues. This occurs in a number of ways through published material, through organising occasions for major addresses and through partnerships and international dialogues.

For example, just recently, the AIIA branch in Tasmania, in conjunction with the University of Tasmania, held the 2011 Sir James Plimsoll Lecture delivered by the Honorable Kevin Rudd MP to an audience of more than 800. Last year, the Australian Journal of International Affairs was ranked in the ISI citation index as 30th worldwide, the highest ranked journal outside of Europe and North America. The AIIA also continues to publish and distribute policy commentaries on current international issues.

With all that said, the AIIA can do more. The AIIA's federal structure is its strength. However, each branch can improve its performance by learning from what others are doing and drawing on the limited but effective resources of the National Office.

The AIIA has a mandate to inform and stimulate debate in the community. The AIIA is working to encourage a larger membership through a range of value-adding partnerships. The AIIA also needs to do more to tell people what it is doing through all forms of communication including blogs and social media. The AIIA will be seeking to find resources to meet these objectives.

Particular thanks are due to the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade for its support throughout the year. I also thank the National Executive, the Branch Presidents and all the volunteers whose work and support this year have been invaluable to the AIIA's success.

The changing international environment – in particular the rise of China, India, Indonesia and other countries in the region – presents both challenges and opportunities to Australia. The AIIA's unique composition gives it a role in assisting Australia to pursue its international interests at this time. I am confident the AIIA can fulfill this role.

National Executive Director's Report

I was privileged to end the financial year on a cold winter's evening in Melbourne surrounded by a 90-strong crowd at an event on 'Inside the Horn of Africa' moderated by Victorian of the year Dr Berhan Ahmed and organised by AIIA VIC's ACCESS Youth Network. This event shows much about the Australian Institute of International Affairs as a vibrant contemporary organisation.

First, it illustrates the core of the AIIA's mission: to promote public understanding of international affairs. In 2010-2011 the AIIA offered more than 200 events across its seven branches, making an important contribution to public debate. The Horn of Africa event is a good example: it stimulated a lively and at times heated debate on issues such as Western impact on Africa, sources of African dignity and Africa's future. Encouragingly, most comments came from African participants. I had a sense of witnessing the emerging debate among the future leaders of the African community in Australia.

Second, the event shows the diversity of topics covered by the AIIA. In a week in May, the AIIA hosted events on the death of Osama Bin Laden, WikiLeaks, faultlines in the world economy, peace and economics, Europe's energy crisis and a film night on the terrorist attacks in Mumbai. In a week in March, audiences could hear about climate change, lessons from Iraq and Afghanistan, illegal immigration and an international women's day event. The AIIA hosts an average of three events per week.

Third, the event shows the AIIA's engagement with youth. The AIIA offers programs for students and young professionals across the country – from youth-organised events to internships to school programs. Students now make up over a quarter of members at many AIIA branches.

Fourth, it shows the power of the AIIA as a civil society organisation built on volunteerism. For example, AIIA VIC has a 20-member volunteer council, a 35-member ACCESS youth committee, more than 25 student interns and volunteers – and one paid staff member. The AIIA is a powerful vehicle to harness the energy of those with a passion for international affairs – even on a cold winter's night in Melbourne.

Finally, it shows the AIIA's increasing use of new media. The event was publicised via Facebook and Twitter and was recorded and podcast. Thanks to partnerships with Australia's Public Affairs Channel and Slow TV, more of the AIIA's events are being broadcast to a wider audience. The event may also influence discussion in some of the AIIA's traditional publications such as the highly-ranked Australian Journal of International Affairs, or a long-standing book series such as Australia in World Affairs.

I'd like to thank those who made this and similar events possible through this year. The AIIA thanks the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade, all of the AIIA's sponsors and partners, all the donors and Friends of the AIIA, and all the AIIA's volunteer office-bearers, interns, professional volunteers and staff. I thank each and every one of them for their contribution.

The AIIA is entering an exciting period of development under National President John McCarthy AO FAIIA, Vice-President Zara Kimpton OAM and the current National Executive. I acknowledge the contribution of past National President Clive Hildebrand and Vice-President Geoff Miller AO and thank them for the legacy they left: an AIIA that is active and engaged and looks confidently towards the next stage in its evolution.

AIIA National Office and Branches

The Australian Institute of International Affairs consists of seven state and territory branches coordinated by a National Office located in Canberra at Stephen House. This office is managed by National Executive Director Melissa Conley Tyler and Deputy Director John Robbins CSC with oversight by a National Executive composed of Branch Presidents and national officeholders.

National Office is responsible for research and national publications, development activities, and organising policy oriented events. It hosts an internship program and maintains a library and conference centre. It also provides support to Branches, such as coordinating multi-state tours, fundraising, communication and negotiating nationwide member benefits.

Branches are the primary point of access to the AIIA and provide member programs, discussion forums, special member groups, youth education, career development initiatives, study tours, community education and localised membership benefits.

AIIA Events Schedule

The Australian Institute of International Affairs provides a forum for discussion and debate by arranging lectures, conferences and seminars. In providing a forum for debate the AIIA does not formulate its own institutional views but invites speakers to express their own views either in a public forum or under Chatham House rule.

AIIA events range from intimate discussions to large lectures. Each Branch works autonomously on its own program on topics of current interest. The AIIA has demonstrated its capacity to organise quality high-level events. Over 2010-11 the AIIA National Office successfully organised a series of policy-oriented national events where, in each case, the guest list was of the highest calibre and the program received high praise from participants.

A total of 207 events was held across the country and internationally in 2010-11. The AIIA regularly partners with its sister institutes of international affairs overseas.

National Events

National President's Forum 2010: Australia and the Chinese Century?

On 19 October 2010, the AIIA hosted a National President's Forum on Australia and the Chinese Century? at Parliament House in Brisbane. The Forum brought together government officials, academics, journalists, professionals and other experts to discuss, debate and engage with the issues that shape Australia-China relations today.

The forum was preceded by a public event moderated by the Australian Financial Review's China Correspondent Colleen Ryan. Following the Forum, participants were invited by Her Excellency the Governor of Queensland Ms Penelope Wensley AO to a reception at Government House for the presentation of the 2010 Fernberg Lecture.

Highlights of the Forum included:

- participation by more than 30 experts on Australia-China relations
- involvement of four key government departments, seven universities, five international organisations and media representatives
- lively opening addresses followed by an emphasis on open discussion
- preparation of a Rapporteur's Report by Geoffrey Miller AO
- distribution of reports and recommendations to relevant policy-makers

Public and Citizen Diplomacy

On 6-7 June 2011 the AIIA hosted a Forum on Public and Citizen Diplomacy in collaboration with the Asia Pacific College of Diplomacy at ANU and the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade. Discussion focused on the importance of projecting an effective image abroad and how Australia can augment its current practice. An expert group of participants included Professor Jan Melissen of the Clingendael Netherlands Institute of International Affairs, Ms Anne Olsen Schodde of the US Center for Citizen Diplomacy and Mr Mark Scott AO, Managing Director of the ABC.

National Events

The History of Australia's Involvement with the United Nations

A forum on the History of Australia's Involvement with the United Nations was held in Canberra on 1-2 February 2011 in conjunction with the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade. The Forum brought together government officials, academics and other experts to debate and engage with the issues that continue to shape Australia-UN relations today. The object of the Forum was to examine Australia's role in the UN from inception to the present, including significant issues related to the UN. Highlights included the involvement of three former Permanent Representatives to the UN, former UN officials and other experts.

Australia Joins the Asia-Europe Meeting

On 9 and 10 August 2010, AIIA National Office in conjunction with AIIA VIC and ACT Branch hosted two events concerning Australia and the Asia-Europe Meeting (ASEM) with the support of the Konrad Adenauer Stiftung. The event stimulated discussion on the meaning of Australia joining ASEM from October 2010 and addressed current trends in ASEM, including institutional structure, agenda and authority. The AIIA was pleased to involve the European Union Delegation, Belgian Embassy and the heads of four leading Australian centres for the study of Europe. The symposia increased publicity for ASEM and improved understanding about ASEM from multiple viewpoints.

Taiwan Roundtable

On 28 October 2010, the AIIA in collaboration with the Taipei Economic and Cultural Office in Australia welcomed invited guests to an exclusive roundtable discussion with a delegation of distinguished Taiwanese academics and officials from the Institute of International Relations, National Chengchi University, Taipei and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Taipei. The discussion included cross-strait relations and the economic cooperation framework agreement.

Highlights

“Economically, we are dependent on China and so is Asia for growth, and so indeed is the world. When Australian business talks about Asia, it talks about China.”

Mr Rowan Callick
Asia-Pacific Editor, The Australian

Dr Rong Ying
Vice President, China Institute of International Studies

“We need a vision for the future. We should understand that our real influence comes not by being a compliant ally of the United States, but by working with other like minded countries – Canada, Sweden, and other Nordic Countries – other countries that have dedicated their policies over years to a peaceful and cooperative world. Working together, such middle-ranking powers have a significant influence on the great issues before us all.”

Rt. Hon Malcolm Fraser AC CH
Former Australian Prime Minister

“There is a general understanding that more women on boards is not only the right thing to do, but that it is also common business sense to have a diversified representation of society in top of management positions, including boards. It is imperative for economic growth and social cohesion.”

HE Ms Susanne Shine
Danish Ambassador to Australia

Highlights

“How has WikiLeaks changed the world? We are witnessing something like two galaxies in collision, a massive, but slow moving process. The hot swirling mass of diplomatic communications is in collision with the fast moving, rapidly changing and supremely adaptable mass of the internet.”

Mr Paul Barratt AO
Former Secretary Department of Defence

“There is so much Australia can do to support economic and political reforms in Africa at this time. Australia has also expressed interest in pursuing the millennium development goals as well as addressing peace and security challenges in Africa and I am happy that Australia has made clear that cooperation and dialogue with Nigeria will form an important part of this new Australia-Africa dialogue.”

HE Mr Martin Uhomoibhi
Permanent Secretary, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Federal Republic of Nigeria

“Cultural diplomacy should be more highly valued, it needs to be rethought, its goals to be spelled out and its regulation handled sensitively....Australia has amazing opportunities for artistic and intellectual development if cultural diplomacy becomes part of our national agenda, but it may look and feel very different from traditional cultural exchanges.”

Research Chair's Report

The rich and varied program of research activities on Australia and international affairs has continued in 2010-11 as an important means by which the AIIA connects both with its membership and with the broader community.

The research activities of the AIIA are guided by the Research Committee, consisting of:

- Associate Professor Shirley Scott, UNSW
- Ms Melissa Conley Tyler, AIIA
- Professor Peter Edwards, Flinders University
- Associate Professor Marcus Haward, University of Tasmania
- Professor Ann Capling, University of Melbourne
- Professor Tony Milner, ANU
- Professor Andrew O'Neil, Griffith University
- Professor Samina Yasmeen, University of Western Australia
- Professor Garry Rodan, Murdoch University.

The AIIA has continued its successful series of policy commentaries aimed at contributing informed perspectives on topical issues of relevance to Australian foreign policy. The series is intended for AIIA members as well as the general public and media. The following volumes are available both in hard copy and are available from www.aiaa.asn.au:

- Looking West: An Indian Ocean Perspective, with contributions by Sam Bateman, Ian Hall, Roger Donnelly, Benjamin Ford and Auriol Weigold;
- Democracy and Discontent: The 2010 Elections in Myanmar, with contributions by Mely Caballero-Anthony, Morten Pederson and Trevor Wilson;
- ICT4IR: International Relations in the Digital Age, with contributions by Anthony Billingsley, Alison Broinowski, Myriam Dunn Cavelty and Fergus Hanson.

The next edition of AIIA's long-standing Australia in World Affairs series is in press, again edited by Professors James Cotton and John Ravenhill. This volume covers the years 2006-2010 and is being published by Oxford University Press.

Work is well underway for a third edition of International Law in Australia to follow the volumes edited by D.P. O'Connell in 1965 and by K.W. Ryan in 1984. Edited by Professor Donald Rothwell, the volume will consist of contributions from more than twenty leading Australian international lawyers. A successful workshop for contributors was held on 22 June 2011 and Thomson Reuters plans a release date in 2012.

AIIA joined with the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade for a seminar on the history of Australia's involvement in the United Nations with the resulting publication published by the Department.

Going Global – Australia, Brazil, Indonesia, Korea and South Africa in International Affairs was published in May 2010 in conjunction with the Konrad Adenauer Stiftung.

Journal Editor's Report

In the authoritative Thomson Reuters Journal Citation Report for 2010, the Australian Journal of International Affairs (AJIA) maintained an overall ranking among the world's international relations journals of 30 out of 59. The journal remains the most highly ranked and cited Australian peer reviewed outlet concerned with international relations.

The Editorial Board was expanded in 2010 to include three outstanding scholars in the field, with a strong emphasis on the international relations of the Asia-Pacific. Professor Zhu Feng (Peking University), Associate Professor Alice Ba (University of Delaware) and Professor Jason Sharman (Griffith University) were appointed as Editorial Board members effective from June 2011. As with previous changes to the Editorial Board, these changes are aimed at bolstering the Editorial Board's breadth and depth of expertise with a view to positioning the AJIA to maintain, and potentially improve, its world ranking over the coming year.

Editorial Board

Associate Professor Alice Ba, University of Delaware

Professor Nick Bisley, La Trobe University

Ms Melissa Conley Tyler, AIIA

Professor James Cotton, Australian Defence Force Academy

Professor Zhu Feng, Peking University

Dr Evelyn Goh, Royal Holloway, University of London

Dr Ian Hall, Australian National University

Professor Michael Mastanduno, Dartmouth College

Professor Andrew McIntyre, Australian National University

Mr Rory Medcalf, Lowy Institute for International Policy

Professor Anthony Milner, Australian National University

Dr Susan Park, University of Sydney

Professor Garry Rodan, Murdoch University

Professor Jason Sharman, Griffith University

Professor Hugh White, Australian National University

Professor Samina Yasmeen, University of Western Australia

In 2011, the AJIA featured three special issues in addition to high quality scholarly articles: on the Australia-Japan relationship, on Australian and Chinese perspectives on security governance in Asia, and on the future of the European Union. In addition, a range of book review contributions continued to provide readers with a summary of new publications in the field.

All AJIA publications continue to combine the best aspects of academic rigour with policy relevance – a long-standing hallmark of the AJIA – to yield high-impact scholarship that aims further to promote the journal's standing among its international peers.

AIIA VIC Study Tour to Vietnam

The AIIA VIC study tour for 2011 was held in Vietnam from 14-21 April. The tour was organised and led by Mr Les Rowe and Ms Zara Kimpton OAM and the 25 participants included members from AIIA VIC as well as from NSW and Western Australia. Vietnam was chosen as the venue for the study tour because of its increasing importance regionally and its importance to Australia. There is now a substantial trading relationship and increasingly productive foreign policy cooperation between Australia and Vietnam.

The tour began in Hanoi and included visits to Ha-long Bay, Hue, Hoi An, Da Lat, Ho Chi Minh City and the Mekong delta. The itinerary was chosen to provide participants with a snapshot of some of the important historical and tourist sites in Vietnam, the scale and nature of economic development in the country and the great variety of the terrain which has had such a profound effect on Vietnam's history.

In both Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City the group had briefings by the Australian Ambassador HE Mr Alister Cox and embassy staff, the Australian Consul-General Mr Graeme Swift and his staff, representatives of the Vietnamese Government and various think tanks, the media, business people, academics and educational providers.

AIIA VIC is grateful to all those who participated in the briefings which added substantially to the interest of the tour and participants' understanding of developments occurring in the country. The group reported back to AIIA VIC members at a briefing session in Melbourne in June. A copy of the report of the visit is available at www.aiia.asn.au.

AIIA VIC International Careers Conference

The sixth annual International Careers Conference (ICC) was held on Friday 27 August 2010. The purpose of the ICC is to provide information and contacts for careers advice in international affairs for undergraduate and postgraduate students. The conference was held at the University of Melbourne and advertised widely. Students from a range of colleges and universities attended and were provided with a framework and understanding of the context of an international career, as well as ideas about where they might find satisfaction in an international pathway.

The day consisted of an opening keynote followed by a number of short presentations, chaired by Victoria Branch president Michael MacKellar AM, then three breakout sessions repeated so that each delegate could attend all three, an afternoon keynote and a short information presentation about ACCESS. Speakers were selected for their varied international experience and expertise in their chosen field including:

- Government (Chair Bill Fisher): Austrade, Department of Immigration and Citizenship, and Australian Secret Intelligence Service
- Business (Chair Julian Reeves): ANZ, Mallesons and Interculture
- International Agencies and Services (Chair Les Rowe): UN, AVI and Oxfam

The ICC provides rich and varied insights into the world of work in an international context and is clearly appreciated by those attending.

Emerging Scholars

The Emerging Scholars series was launched by the AIIA in 2007 and provides a unique opportunity for young researchers to influence debate in the community on a number of important issues. For interns, it is a valuable opportunity to publish, often for the first time, and to reach an audience of their peers and elders.

Emerging Scholars 2010-2011 includes papers on a variety of challenging issues in international affairs.

Topics included in the 2010-2011 volume include: international humanitarian law on terrorism, sovereignty in the Arctic, US interests in the US-Australia Alliance, use of public diplomacy at the 2010 Shanghai World Expo, organised crime and terrorism in Papua New Guinea, deterrent measures against asylum seekers in the Asia Pacific and Mediterranean and the role of digital information and communications technology in international human rights advocacy.

AIIA South Australia kindly hosted the launch of Emerging Scholars in June 2011.

Nygh Internship

The Nygh Internship was established by the AIIA and the International Law Association (Australia Branch) to provide a law student or graduate with the rare opportunity to travel to The Hague Conference and work with international leaders in private international law. The Conference is represented by 60 member states and works to find internationally agreed approaches to issues such as the jurisdiction of courts, applicable law and the recognition and enforcement of judgments.

Nygh Interns assist with research, translation and preparation of meetings under the direction of the Secretariat at the Conference. In 2010-11 the AIIA held a ceremony to award the recipient of the 2011 Nygh Internship Award, Melissa Hanks.

The Peter Nygh Hague Conference Internship is an award in memory of the late Hon Dr Peter Nygh AM, a leading international lawyer and former judge of the Family Court of Australia.

The AIIA would like to thank the Nygh Family, the Attorney General's Department and other kind donors for their generous donations to make this program possible.

Young Professionals Networks

AIIA VIC

ACCESS is the youth network of AIIA VIC. ACCESS affords members the opportunity to learn, network and exchange ideas at lectures, panel discussions, professional development seminars and social events.

ACCESS operates as an extension of the AIIA centered on a steering committee. After several years of involvement, our hard working Chair Ishita Acharyya has handed over the reins to the new chair Jason Sing. Thanks are due to Ishita for her dedication and vision in further developing ACCESS.

ACCESS held a number of events during 2010-2011 exploring 'West Papua's Search for Self-Determination', 'Secrets Behind the Wire Fence – Mandatory Detention and Mental Health', 'Negotiating with the Taliban – a Conversation We Never Had', a Professional Development Day, 'The World in 2011' and 'Inside the Horn of Africa'. All ACCESS activities are developed through the ideas and passion of a team of committed volunteers.

ACCESS distributes two publications: Monthly Access and Quarterly Access. The AIIA thanks DFAT State Office and Roy Morgan Research for their generous grant support in establishing these publications.

AIIA VIC ACCESS members

ACT Branch

The ACT youth program seeks to reach all tertiary students and other young professionals in the Canberra region with an interest in international affairs. This includes the use of social networking tools including Facebook. It held a number of events during 2010/2011. In all cases these events involved partnering with other student organisations at ANU and the University of Canberra and co-hosting a young professionals event with the US embassy.

The Branch also manages a Mentoring Program that draws on a range of experts to assist tertiary students with their research projects.

WA Branch

2010-2011 was a year of major updates and streamlining to make the WA Young Professionals Network (YPN) even more efficient. The year was unfortunately less productive in terms of organising events than previous years given the handover from the previous convenor, Amy Blundell. Since then the YPN has focused on systemising its current database of members and other networks to transfer all communications to the AIIA hosted server.

The year has also been spent focusing on putting together a brand new event inspired by the Emerging Scholars initiative by the National Office with the goal of showcasing young talent in WA. Since October 2010 the YPN has prepared for an inaugural event by approaching academics and asking for guidance in how to best proceed with such an event. The end result was the AIIA Developing International Scholars Workshop held in Perth on 18 August 2011. Improved communication logistics have provided the YPN the opportunity to go one step ahead and use social media such as Twitter and Facebook to communicate with members, in a hope to increase the number of active young members in the WA Branch.

VCE Schools Program

AIIA VIC continued to run its successful seminar series including sessions on 'Power and National Interest', 'Conflict and Internationalism' and 'Australian Foreign Policy and Power in the Asia Pacific'. These sessions are designed to assist students studying the Victorian Certificate of Education subject International Studies and are very well attended. The high calibre of speakers provides students with real insight into international issues.

Professional Volunteers

The AIIA relies on the support of more than 100 voluntary office-holders as well as professional volunteers such as librarians and editors who share their specialised skills around the country.

AIIA would like to recognise and thank the following National Office volunteers for their contributions in 2010-2011:

Pam Harris
Ann Parkinson
Peter Rosenmai

Matt Smith
Kim Wilkinson

Young Diplomats Program

The AIIA Young Diplomats Program (YDP) is an educational program introducing secondary school students to the nature and importance of international relations. Teams of Year 10 students test their research and diplomatic skills in a mock international negotiation where they are judged by academics and diplomats from the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade.

The YDP is run in cooperation with James Cook University. In 2010, 11 schools from the Townsville area participated in a scenario based on asylum-seekers and refugees.

The 2010 group winner was Kirwan State High School, representing the USA. The winner of the individual Young Diplomat award was Edward Harridge from Cathedral School, representing the UK.

Internships

Each year AIIA National Office and Branches host a number of interns from all over Australia and the world. Interns work on customised programs according to their learning and career development needs that can include a mix of training and practical experience in research projects, events, research, communications and office management.

AIIA NSW and SA Branch continued their internship programs in 2010-2011 while Queensland commenced its program. These programs introduce students to the AIIA and develops contacts and collaboration with universities. This year cooperating universities include Macquarie, UNSW, Wollongong, the University of Sydney and the University of Adelaide.

Internships with the AIIA National Office and Branches provide the opportunity to build networks and in some cases credit towards a degree, all while offering invaluable experience working with the international relations community.

More of the AIIA's events are now recorded in some way, including podcasts and video. A number of branches make recordings available through iTunes. Partnerships with the Australia's Public Affairs Channel (A-PAC) and SlowTV led to AIIA events being broadcast on pay TV and online. Interviews and other material is put on YouTube to promote AIIA events.

AIIA branches have also begun to use social media to promote their work, including Facebook, Linked In and Twitter. In some cases, this has led to dramatic increases in attendance.

Online distribution is used for a number of AIIA publications, especially youth publications such as Quarterly ACCESS and Monthly ACCESS.

Fellows of the AIIA

Fellows Awards 2010

As part of the AIIA's 75th anniversary in 2008, the AIIA launched a Fellows program to recognise exceptional contributions to Australia's international relations.

The overriding criterion for selection is a very high level of distinction in and distinguished contribution to Australia's international relations. Nominations received from AIIA members nationwide were assessed in confidence by a selection committee made up of members of the AIIA's National Executive and existing Fellows.

The AIIA congratulates the following Fellows of the Australian Institute of International Affairs for 2010:

Professor Bruce Grant
Mr Allan Gyngell AO
Professor Helen Hughes AO
Dr Janet Hunt
Mr James Ingram AO
Mr Sidney Baillieu Myer AC
Mr Ric Smith AO PSM

The AIIA plans to announce Fellows of the AIIA annually to recognise excellence in Australia's international affairs community.

Honorary Treasurer's Report

Last year it was the 'Global Financial Crisis', this year, the proposed 'Carbon Tax' but despite continuing financial uncertainty, the AIIA remains financially secure due to the appreciating asset base of Stephen House.

Asset base aside, the astute management of resources by our dynamic National Executive Director Melissa Conley Tyler (ably assisted by Deputy John Robbins) has contributed in no small part to the success of the AIIA. Former National President Clive Hildebrand's skilful guidance over previous years has formed an excellent foundation for the incoming National President, John McCarthy AO FAIIA who is carrying on in like style. I must also mention the valuable work done by the interns who have brought with them a variety of specialist skills and who have both expanded the administrative knowledge base, and have also lent willing hands at various functions. Additionally, the National Executive members have been responsible for ensuring that the Australia-wide membership is well-served and that they remain focused on the primary aim of the AIIA: promoting an interest in, and a knowledge of, foreign relations.

The AIIA's National income is, and continues to be, derived from four main sources (in order of magnitude):

- rental revenue from the AIIA's headquarters at Stephen House
- an annual grant from the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade
- royalties from publications such as the Australian Journal of International Affairs
- Donations and bequests.

The income of the State Branches derives from membership subscriptions, property, investments, donations and bequests and sponsorships.

All donations are tax deductible as the AIIA has DGR status, which means it is a registered gift charity for fundraising purposes and has income tax exemption. Donated funds are distributed to state branches by National Executive taking into account the donor's wishes. Apart from donations, branches are supported primarily by membership and events income. On-line tax-deductible donations can be made via the AIIA website (www.aiia.asn.au). National Vice President Zara Kimpton OAM is an outstanding role model for current and future donors and has very generously pledged $10,000 per year for each of five years.

The AIIA's ongoing expenditure is mainly associated with the previously mentioned income streams, such as maintaining Stephen House, the AIIA's publishing activities and DFAT grant activities. Salary expenditure is indeed low for such a high profile organisation as AIIA with the National Executive Director and Deputy Director the only two paid staff at the national level. The AIIA is very fortunate to benefit from the broad ranging voluntary assistance of interns from both overseas and Australia.

The AIIA also manages the Nygh Fund which sponsors an internship with the Hague Conference on Private International Law. Generous gifts from the Nygh family and the Attorney General's Department generate the income for this scholarship, this year presented to Melissa Hanks.

Skilled leadership, efficient administration and a large, tangible asset base augur well for the long term future of the organisation.

Libraries

The AIIA hosts a small specialised library in Canberra with holdings in the areas of international affairs and foreign relations. The library is available for reference to all AIIA members, as well as interested non-members. The catalogue is available online at www.aiaa.asn.au. Donations to help expand the library's collections and services are welcome. Many thanks are due to AIIA's volunteer librarians Ann Parkinson and Pamela Harris.

The John Legge library at AIIA VIC and the Charteris Library at AIIA NSW also have substantial holdings in international relations. Many thanks to members and interns for all their hard work within the libraries throughout the year.

IN MEMORIAM

MISS NANCE DICKINS

Sadly, this year marked the passing of Nance Dickins. Nance served as National Secretary from 1946 to 1975 and as Secretary of the Victorian branch for many years. She received a BEM for her service to the AIIA. She was a Life Member of the AIIA. Nance was invaluable to the progress and success of the AIIA, and the AIIA will sorely miss her.
