R.G. Casey: Minister for External Affairs 1951- 60

Australian Institute of International Affairs, 2012. Paperback, 179pp
Edited by Melissa Conley Tyler, John Robbins and Adrian March

The Right Honourable R.G. Casey, later Lord Casey, was Australia's Minister for External Affairs from 1951 to 1960. During his time as foreign minister, Australia refocused its relationship with a newly decolonised Asia, recognised its Antarctic interests, and was split between new and old allies over the Suez Crisis.

On the 9 February 2010, the Australian Institute of International Affairs held a Forum to examine Casey's era as foreign minister. The Forum brought together some of Australia's most eminent academics and experts in international relations, former senior diplomats and government officials to explore the life, work and achievements of R.G. Casey.

The Forum focused on his contributions to Australian diplomacy and his continuing influence on Australian foreign policy thinking. It also discussed Lord and Lady Casey's joint contribution to international affairs and Lord Casey's relationships with key public servants Sir Arthur Tange and Sir James Plimsoll.

The lessons of Lord Casey's era continue to be relevant to Australia's foreign policy today.
